The Ministry is Ready For e-Governance- Chief Minister Madhya Pradesh Singh

Q. How is the concept of e-governance shaping up in the Madhya Pradesh? What are the strategic goals of the National E-Governance Plan ?

Answer - E-Governance has been a significant phenomenon for Madhya Pradesh, which has been grouped into backward states. The situation is changing fast. It is fast emerging as the IT State among the north Indian states. The innovative application of IT tools has made public life easy following the introduction of enabled public services introduced in various departments. The e-governance is also increasing transparency due to which the chances of corruption are being gradually dwindling. With the introduction of rural power supply and communication network accessibility to the IT enabled mechanisms in public domain is also improving. E-governance has enabled the state administration keep watch on the implementation of various schemes. So far as goals of NEGP are concerned apart from other things, we are promoting public-private and community partnership in development sector. Naturally the IT sector will witness the implementation of this partnership for greater common good.

Q. How many departments are currently under the e-gov network? Is the shortage of workers for manning the networks an issue?

Answer - Now almost all departments are within e-governance networking directly or indirectly. The staff handling e-governance mechanisms at different levels are being given training.

I have already asked all heads of departments to chalk out e-governance plan and are on updating such plans in view of the requirements. I want that the benefit of e-governance must reach out to the masses and the IT tools must be accessible to common people. The Video Conferencing strategy to address facilitates interaction between the CM, District Collector and Citizen for grievance redressal saved a sum of Rs. 22 crore, which could have been utilized on conventional methods.
